

Is your rural CAC interested in improving mental health screening and referral processes?

Researchers at the University of Pittsburgh are conducting a research study on the implementation of the Care Process Model for Pediatric Traumatic Stress. We invite CACs in rural Pennsylvania to participate!

What is the Care Process Model for Pediatric Traumatic Stress (CPM-PTS)?

- The CPM-PTS offers a way for CACs to identify and respond to child traumatic stress and suicidality. It includes tools to evaluate children's risk of traumatic stress and suicide, guidance for collaborative decision-making, and brief interventions to help children and families cope with stress.

What is this study about?

- This study has 2 goals.
  - Goal 1: Test the effect of the CPM-PTS on caregivers' understanding of their children's mental health needs and intentions to initiate treatment.
  - Goal 2: Evaluate the feasibility of two different approaches to implementation.

What will CACs do?

- CACs will implement the CPM-PTS. CACs will be randomly assigned to 1 of 2 different implementation approaches. Both approaches to implementation include training, technical assistance, and materials to support implementation.
- CACs will provide the research team with contact information for multidisciplinary team members and encourage team members to participate in research activities.
- CACs will provide copies of documents created during the implementation process and de-identified administrative data on clients served by the CAC.
- CACs will be involved in the research study for at least 18 months and no more than 2 years. CACs will receive a small honorarium for their support of the research study.

What will multidisciplinary team members do?

- Participate in CPM-PTS implementation activities.
- Complete short online surveys at the start of the study, 6 months later, and 12 months later.
- Participate in interviews about their team and experiences with the CPM-PTS.
- Team members who complete surveys and interviews will be compensated for their time.
